Highline Honors Marriages At Weekend Event and Services

Married Couples Weekend was a big success! The weekend began with Married Couples Night on 5.20.16. More than 75 couples: 1) were hosted by Jane Knight and Jack Fratangelo; 2) started off enjoying great hors d'oeuvres 3) had fun with an Ice Breaker that got everyone up and moving around and (perhaps) learning a little something about their spouses; 4) then saw a video from Focus On The Family, featuring 3 comedians exploring different areas of marriage and Christianity; 5) in between these speakers, the action got started from the stage -- also via video -- as Pastor Tim and Kelly (who are Jane's and Jack's respective spouses) responded to questions specifically related to that section, while Jane and Jack waited patiently for their chance to speak to both the original questions and their spouses' responses; 6) then each couple discussed these questions between themselves, before sharing a bit with their respective tables and the group as a whole; 7) after the 3 sections, we wrapped up with a gift bag with chocolates and Randy Southern's great book, 52 Uncommon Dates: A Couple's Adventure Guide for Praying, Playing, and Staying Together.

Pastor Tim affirmed Highline's commitment to marriage in his weekend sermons. Whether you were there for his original sermon or not, please feel free to get a recording via the internet or CD!

We expect and hope and pray that this entire weekend will have an enriching and long-lasting effect on many marriages.

Ministry to Young Adults

Highline is in the process of developing ministry groups specifically for young adults. This proves to be a tricky process since young adults can span quite a range of ages and stages of life, and those stages can change rapidly. Our first step in this process is to offer a Sunday morning class for the youngest adults (post high school through 20's). Our target for this class is young adults (single or married) without children.

YOUNG ADULT
MINISTRY

Young Adult Gathering

Starting June 19

Sundays @ 10:40 upstairs in the North Building Great Room

Led by David (& Jennifer) Hansen

Depending on the needs and interests of the group, topics may include:

- ◆ What does it mean to actively pursue God/holiness?
- ◆ What makes young people want to "check out" of church?
- ◆ Cultural mores are changing . . . should the church be changing with them?
- ◆ Do you think the church and/or the Bible is consistent with scientific revelation?
- ◆ What is your understanding of spiritual warfare?

If you would like more info about this class or are passionate about a thriving young adult ministry at Highline, please communicate with Teresa Barnes (teresa@highlinechristian.org).

And the Results are in!

Our new officers for the 2016-2017 Church Year will be the following:

Treasurer—Nathan Louvier Assistant Treasurer—Bill Olson

Financial Secretary—Carol Marshall Trustee—Dave Sloan

Elders- Tim Crawford, Sal Dena, Chuck Hansen, Konrad Lindblom and Dave Rogge

The Operating Budget for 2016-2017 of $1,207,114 was approved.

"Home Again" for a Missionary Child

A big part of the Highline Family are our missionaries serving in countries all around the world. The life of a missionary child presents some unique challenges. When their formative years are spent in another country, moving back to the States can bring about conflicting emotions. Sixteen year old Ellie Beagle, who's parents have served orphans and missionary teens in Kenya for the last six years, recently wrote, sharing her thoughts as she looks forward to coming "home" again. Here are some excerpts from that letter:

"I love Kenya. I love it so much. I consider Kenya as my home, and I can't imagine ever leaving. But the time is coming soon when we will move back to Washington...."

I feel that if I want to go back to Washington, I will be betraying Kenya in a way; leaving my good friends here at RVA (Rift Valley Academy) whom I have finally had the courage and humility to open up to with my fears, leaving the culture I have grown up in, and leaving the language I am so eager to learn. I love the beauty of Africa. It has its ups and its downs, pros and cons like anywhere else, but I love the different kind of beauty that is here. However, I have also been thinking of the Pacific Northwest---it's also so beautiful, as much of God's creation as anywhere else. I think about the crystal clear rivers and snow capped mountains and tall evergreen trees--they aren't yellow savannas, acacia trees, and termite mounds, but they are just as beautiful as a part of God's diverse creation....Why can't I have two homes? Why does my heart feel so twisted between these two places? I get excited about seeing my family again; going on walks, cooking, browsing old books at Goodwill, having conversations...having sleepovers with my cousins....the prospect of a summer job (and of course my dream job would be working at a stable--and that is more a reality there than it is here...Then I think of Kiswahili, about wanting to use this to honor God.

I think of how I can still go on mission trips, but to new places like Mexico or Haiti. I am getting excited and that scares me...Kenya will always be part of who I am and I never want to forget that....Will I come back to Kenya? I think now that I will, for missions work. But that also reminds me that God's work can be done anywhere: it needs to be done everywhere. I can serve and honor Him wherever that may be; wherever He call me...

This is a little piece of my heart...a picture of my torn heart...Feel free to share this. I know what God has in store is good.

Love, Ellie"

"...if I want to go back to Washington, I will be betraying Kenya in a way..."

Thank you for the wonderful and generous support you share with our missionaries as you give to the LORD's work at Highline. Please continue your prayers, remembering some of the unique challenges of our missionary kids.

Seniors' Activities

June's activity will be lunch at the Olive Garden @ South Center. Meet on Wednesday, June 1 at 11:45 a.m. at the restaurant. If you need a ride or wish to carpool, Call Steve Moreland or Georgia Henney for more information. Please sign up in the Atrium or on the HUB.

July's activity we will have the pleasure of hearing The Singing Trumpet! Bob and Connie Bowers will be sharing a patriotic presentation of music and video. Bob has been playing the trumpet since he was in the fourth grade and has taken the opportunities to share it many places throughout the years. Folks have shared that the trumpet sounds like it is singing! This should be a real treat for us, so let's have a big turnout. Following the concert we will be going out to lunch. Stay tuned for more information.

Volleyball Team Update

Our Highline Christian Volleyball Team, consisting of Tammie Lindblom, Randy & Lori Nye, John & Emma Maltzberger, Kevin Sutton, Tracy Johnson, and Chris Shockley had a very exciting season! We had some exciting wins, some very close losses, and great teamwork! We finished the regular season in 2nd Place, only two games away from sealing the 1st Place position! This is additionally exciting because just three years ago when Highline first started a Volleyball team, we came in last place! The improvement that our team has seen is really fun! We enjoy the game of volleyball, we are bonding as a team, we hope we are being a light for the Lord in a secular league, but it is also fun to be seeing victories on the scoreboard. We will be playing on May 31 at 6:15. A win in that match means another game that night at 7:15 to finish Spring Season. All Volleyball matches are played at Kent Commons on 4th and James in downtown Kent. The league doesn't play in the Summer months, but there will be more opportunities to cheer on the team beginning again in September.

Aluminum Can Collection

Please rinse your cans and place them in the bin in the Community Room. Each month about $25 is received through recycling. Shoemaker Circle has set a goal of $50 per month in receipts. All funds are donated to Missions. Questions? See Mary Webb.

Mount St. Helens Visit

Are You Ready For A Summer Adventure To Mount St. Helens?

Who	Anyone who is interested and a person willing to drive the bus
What	A day trip to the famous mountain with a picnic
When	Wednesday, August 17 th from 8:00 am to 6:30 or possibly 7:00 pm
Where	To Mount St. Helens Creation Center, an excursion on the way up the mountain, Weyerhaeuser Learning Center, and Johnston Ridge Observatory with a stop at a local restaurant on the way home for their famous cobbler.
Why	To proclaim God's glory and enjoy His awesome creation
How	On the Highline bus
Cost	$12 each to pay for Mt. St. Helens Creation Center services and gas for the church bus

Recently Mount St. Helens Museum moved to a larger facility south of its previous location and is now known as the Mount St. Helens Creation Center. Anyone going to the center will see the new layout and a totally new museum-type experience.

Thirty-six years ago Mount St. Helens exploded without precise warning creating a landscape of moon like devastation no one expected. To this day this catastrophe has provided information that has saved the lives of thousands around the world and is still monitored with great interest. Today God has shown He is still in control. How? Vegetation has returned with amazing speed that has brought back not only a variety of small plants, bushes, and trees, but animals small and large—including elk that enjoy free range grazing without having to maneuver in and around undesirable growth. Like humans, they enjoy the easy way. Everyone brings their own picnic lunch, which will be eaten at picnic tables at Weyerhaeuser Museum. Bring your own water bottle. Extra water will be provided. All three sites have gift shops if you desire to purchase any additional items. On our return trip we will stop at a local restaurant to feast on their well-known cobbler of many flavors.

In addition to our Highline trip, there will be other day activities in July and August sponsored by the Mount St. Helens Creation Center, including hikes in the area. For more information or questions go to the mount St Helens web site or contact Connie Egger.

Celebrate With Us!

I would like to invite my church family at Highline to join with my family and me in celebrating the life of my mother, Ruth Tabaka, who went home to glory on April 30th at 83 years of age.

The memorial service will be held at Highline Christian Church on:

July 9, 2016 at 1:00 p.m.
Pastor Tim will officiate
A time of fellowship will follow

"Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away" (Isaiah 51:11).

With great affection in the Lord,

Kathy Bledsoe

From Your Church Life Director

Hi Everyone,
 God continues to move at Highline!
 This weekend Highline just commissioned our second class of Stephen Ministers! To quote the Stephen Ministry website: "Stephen Ministers are congregation members trained by Stephen Leaders to offer high-quality, one-to-one Christian care to people going through tough times. A Stephen Minister usually provides care to one person at a time, meeting with that person once a week for about an hour. Twice a month, Stephen Ministers gather with their Stephen Leaders for supervision and continuing education (This is in addition to their initial 50 Hours of Training). Some important guidelines for this caring relationship protect both the care receiver and the Stephen Minister: The relationship between a care receiver and a Stephen Minister is confidential; Men are matched with men, and women with women. When a care receiver's needs exceed what a Stephen Minister can provide, the Stephen Ministry team makes a referral to an appropriate mental health professional or other community resource." Natalie Barnes, Lina Chan, John Davis, Laurel Fullington, Peggy Hays, Scott Hill, Jim Jobe, Dennis (Denny) Lockett, Gina Rowlee, Larry Siler, Nancy Whitehair, and Gayle Wylie will join Pat Barnett, Becky Bischel, Kathy Bledsoe, David Cowan, Kathy Evans, Jack Fratangelo, David Hansen, Jennifer Hansen, Sandy Huff, Jane Knight, Dr. Tim Knight, Brad Krantz, Carole Marcille, Galen Marcille, Elizabeth Mitchell, Len Run, Betti Scott, Jeremy Snell, Bonnie Stilts, Jim Stilts, Okeoma Ugwoaba, and Tamara Vandenburg on our Stephen Ministry team. What a blessing they are (!), and if you need care – especially you men – please contact us at the Highline Christian Church office.

Puritans on the Potomac

On a late November evening in 1867, two years after the end of the American Civil War, Celestia Ferris, chief washer-woman at the Bureau of Engraving, organized a prayer meeting not far from the U. S. Capitol. She was joined by a circle of earnest Christians, mostly of the Baptist persuasion, who prayed that a new church would be gathered in their community. At the time, there was no church of any denomination in the northwest quarter of Washington, D. C. In 1878, their prayer was answered when thirty-one members joined to form the Metropolitan Baptist Church, so called from Spurgeon's famous Metropolitan Tabernacle in London, which at the time was one of the most famous Protestant churches in the world.

During the first half of the twentieth century, the church grew steadily and reached a membership high in the thousands during the 1950s. Then, plagued by erratic leadership, the church began a spiraling decline not unlike many other urban congregations at the time. By the early 1990s, attendance hovered around one hundred people, one of whom was the famous evangelical theologian Carl F. H. Henry. Henry suggested that the church consider as its next pastor Mark Edward Dever, a somewhat brash but brilliant American student just then completing his Ph.D. at Cambridge University. (Full disclosure: Mark Dever was once my student, and I preached at his pastoral installation in 1994).

To reverse the fortunes of a flagging downtown congregation required skill, pluck, and some sanctified grit. Dever had all of these, but he also put in place a strategy that most church growth gurus would have deplored. For example, he began to preach sermons that lasted upwards of one hour. Next, the church excised from its rolls hundreds of inactive

"... he also put in place a strategy that most church growth gurus would have deplored. "

members—some so inactive that they had long been dead! The practice of church discipline was begun. Members were also required to subscribe to a confession of faith and to say "an oath"—this is how a secular journalist described the church covenant—at the monthly communion. Entertainment-based worship was replaced by congregational singing, including many long-forgotten classic hymns from the past. Instead of driving people away, however, over time this approach to church life—to the surprise of many—attracted droves of new believers, many of them millennials and young professionals. Today, the average age of members at Capitol Hill Baptist Church (as Metropolitan is now known) is thirty-one, and the place is bursting at the seams, with standing room only on Sunday mornings.

What explains the success of this counter-cultural congregation? Do we see here what Jonathan Edwards might have called “a surprising work of God,” a mysterious movement of grace that defies analysis? Perhaps. But could it also be that the rising generation has developed a hunger for a more substantial spirituality than that on offer in bland, postmodern construals of religion? Could it be that more and more young adults are finding too thin the “I love Jesus but don’t need the church” mentality? CHBC is marked by doctrinal and ecclesial intentionality. Unlike many evangelicals who stress a personal relationship with Jesus at the expense of churchly commitment, Dever stresses their coinherence. “It is impossible to answer the question what is a Christian? without ending up in a conversation about the church; at least in the Bible it is.”

Dever is a good preacher but his sermons are not characterized by rhetorical or poetic finesse. Instead, he offers a steady diet of biblical exposition—the first of “nine marks” he has outlined for a healthy church. Dever does not often preach topical sermons but rather follows the lectio continua method of preaching through a given book after the model of Huldrych Zwingli and John Calvin in the Reformation. Not long ago, as Dever prepared to preach to his congregation on Psalm 143, he said, “You will be bored if you don’t open your Bible and leave it open. All I’m gonna do is talk about what’s in the Bible.”

CHBC has been described as the epicenter of the new Calvinism sweeping across many evangelical churches today, including the Southern Baptist Convention. (CHBC belongs to the SBC.) However, the church’s literature does not speak of the tenets of Calvinism. Its statement of faith is not the more Calvinistic Philadelphia Confession, a “baptized” version of Westminster, but rather the less precise New Hampshire Confession of Faith. Still, there is no doubt that the church does honor the Puritan heritage of the Reformation and embraces the theology set forth by such Baptist heroes of the past as John Bunyan, Roger Williams, Andrew Fuller, Adoniram Judson, and Charles Haddon Spurgeon himself.

Through Dever’s connection with movements such as The Gospel Coalition and Together For The Gospel, and through the many pastoral interns trained and sent out from Capitol Hill, the theological influence of the church has spread far and wide. In his pathbreaking book, Young, Restless, Reformed, Collin Hansen described a movement that includes the Capitol Hill Puritans.

The resurgence of Calvinism indicates that America hasn’t changed so much as some might suppose. American Christianity has splintered in myriad directions since the Puritans settled New England. But the God they worshiped—attested in the Bible, sovereign in all things, and merciful toward sinners through the self-sacrificed Jesus Christ—still captivates believers today.

It has always been a mystery to scholars of religion how a view of salvation so heavily weighted toward divine initiative and election—what Mark Twain has Huckleberry Finn call “preforeordination”—has so often manifested itself in an activism bent on transforming the world and culture. But in the radical Augustinian tradition—of which Calvinism is only one variant—the glory of God and his predestining grace are clearly motivating, not inhibiting, factors in the revolution of the saints. Those who are looking for a moribund Calvinism turned in on itself, with no vision for the mission of the church in the world, will not find such at CHBC. No, this church is alive with evangelism and mission, with ministries of mercy and compassion, and with church planting schemes throughout North America and around the world. Dever argues for a vision of the catholicity of the church that cuts against four major problems among churches in America today: provincialism, sectarianism, racism, and exclusivism.

But, being a large evangelical Baptist church within easy walking distance of the U. S. Capitol poses special problems. Dever says, “I keep the Gospel central and try to avoid any unduly partisan expressions or language.” Some of his members, he says, are “loud Republicans,” and some are “loud Democrats.” Many of his members work in Congress or in agencies of the federal government. Dever affirms their God-given vocation to serve their country in this way and in fact encourages his entire congregation’s prayerful participation in democratic decision-making. He reminds them that they are citizens of another City, the one with foundations whose builder and maker is God. The church’s Baptist confession of faith declares the ultimate allegiance of all the redeemed. They are followers of “our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the only Lord of the conscience and the Prince of the kings of the earth.”

The prayer Celestia Ferris and her friends offered for a new church on Capitol Hill nearly 150 years ago is still being answered. As T.S. Eliot wrote in Choruses from “The Rock,” “The Church must be forever building, and always decaying/ and always being restored.”

Timothy George is dean of Beeson Divinity School of Samford University and general editor of the Reformation Commentary on Scripture. His email address is tfgeorge@samford.edu.

Women In Touch Brunch—June 4

Don't miss our last brunch before the Summer break. We look forward to seeing you Saturday, June 4, 2016 from 9:30-11 a.m. in the North Building Atrium. Bring a friend (18 and above) and a brunch item to share, Be ready for good fellowship and inspirational guests! It's a picnic theme so bring on the "deviled" eggs!!!

Please RSVP on the HUB or on the sign-up sheet at the table in the Atrium. All women welcome! Childcare provided.

What a great celebration!

At our last Women in Touch breakfast, we celebrated all the women in our lives, moms, aunts, girlfriends, and mentors. A wonderful brunch was provided and served by the Men by God ministry team, and they even did all the dishes.... Thanks guys, it warms our hearts to see men in the kitchen. ❤️ Blessed by some wise and funny stories that Cindy and Kendra Phillips shared, it was a sweet time of connecting and honoring each other. Thanks ladies, and the breakfast "elves" who got the morning off and were pampered and served for a change. Kudos to Chris Andree, expert crepe maker and Tim Crawford, and your team of servers.

Higher Ground Children's Ministry

Remember and Celebrate

Reaching the end of another school year I've had opportunity to receive graduation announcements from various students who are celebrating the amazing accomplishment of completing school as well as have had opportunity to attend my own children's school celebration where they shared snippets of what they learned this year. Gathering to celebrate such academic accomplishments is a blessing and reminds us of the blessing we all have to pause for a moment to reflect on the journey we've been on this past year and all the ways God has proven Himself faithful time and time again.

The environment of Remembering and Celebrating comes out of scripture and is given to us by God in moments like the Passover giving the people something tangible to remember God's mighty work, freeing them from Egypt. Again when Israel crossed the Jordan God commended them to take up 12 stones to set up as a monument to help them remember His faithfulness as they entered the Promised Land. Skip ahead through time and we have the cross and the empty tomb to remind us of God's faithfulness to redeem His people.

Today we have the opportunity to look back over the past year or more and acknowledge God's faithfulness. Take some time to sit down by yourself or with your family to make a list of ways God has shown Himself faithful to you this year and then celebrate through prayer, song, or, like Joshua, set up some stones and praise God.
